USU Writing Center Directors Star Coulbrooke and Susan Andersen presented for an Ideas Panel at the International Writing Centers Association in Denver October 15. Their presentation, titled “Go Run with It: Tutor-Centric Expansion of Specialized Writing Centers Across Campus and Community,” showed how the USU Writing Center gives tutors the initiative to do research and outreach in order to develop additional writing centers on campus and in the non-academic community. Examples are the Science Writing Center, which was established by Samantha Latham, a former English department graduate student, and the Cache Valley Community Writing Center, established by English education graduate Hilary Webb.
